

Fair Use Guidelines

Summary:

The purpose of this document is to provide guidelines and conditions for using, reproducing, editing, and linking to materials created by Auburn University's Office of University Writing, the Miller Writing Center, the ePortfolio Project, and their partners.

In accordance with the Fair Use Doctrine, reproduction done for purposes such as teaching and research does not require further permission. We are happy to make our resources available to users everywhere free of charge. However, we ask that you abide by the terms below when using our website and its accompanying materials.

Examples of works covered by these guidelines include but are not limited to the following:

1. Blog posts, journal and news articles, syllabi, and handouts
2. Presentations, PowerPoints, and instructional materials
3. Videos, audio recordings and broadcasts, and scripts
4. Graphics, images, flyers, and web content

Terms of Use:

- Resources and materials from Auburn University's Office of University Writing may be reproduced free of charge for educational, personal, and training purposes. They may not be reproduced for commercial use, including as part of any event, service, or product where a fee is charged and the goal is to make a profit.
- Resources and materials should be reproduced in their entirety with original logos and/or attributions in place. Logos include the official Auburn University and Office of University Writing logos, "Yeah, Write" logo, Miller Writing Center logo, and ePortfolio Project logo.
- Resources and materials should not be modified from their original format. Information should not be copied and pasted from Office of University Writing materials into new documents.
- Resources and materials should always be attributed to Auburn University's Office of University Writing. Copyright and authorship information attached to documents and other materials should remain intact.

Linking to Our Resources:

- We encourage you to link to resources located on <http://auburn.edu/writing>. While you do not need to ask for permission to link, we ask that you notify us when you do. Taking this action will help us to better serve your users when links and materials are updated. To notify us, simply email us at auburnwrites@auburn.edu with a description of what you're linking to. We will keep your information confidential.
- Please refrain from downloading our materials and hosting them on your own website. Doing so makes it extremely difficult for us to ensure that our materials are kept up to date for users everywhere.
- Please do not place our content in frames on your website; we ask that you link directly to our content following the previously described guidelines.

Contact Us:

- Please note that you only need to contact us under the following circumstances:
 - Commercial requests
 - Link notifications
- If you need to contact us or require additional information, please email us at auburnwrites@auburn.edu or call us at 334-844-7475.
